FEBRUARY 1986

Once again the silence is broken. Coming up on our 15th Reunion you will be receiving a bunch of these communiques. Only two things are required of you, however:

(1) Show up for the reunion; and

(2) Give lots of money this year.

Our class officers are putting together a fun program for us for the reunion, but the essence of it is getting together with old friends, and meeting the people you have read about in the Alumni Magazine and newsletter over the years and said "Who is that guy?"

In case you have been hiding somewhere the reunion dates are June 13-15. Bob Cordy, our reunion chairman, wants to know who is planning to come, and welcomes all ideas about the program. Drop him a line at 149 Brooks St., Medford, Mass. 02155. 617-395-1797(h), 617-223-6291(o).

Bob says the response to his initial mailing as been very, very high. At least 225 members of the class are definitely, or probably, coming, not counting spouses, children and pets. Bob will have another mailing out shortly.

Craig Robelen is heading up reunion giving. Our class has established a goal of $300,000, based on a goal of four times average annual giving. I've already sent in my first check, while paying a Dartmouth tuition, so you can give too.

I'll keep this one short on College news. My latest bulletin from my freshwoman source is that at 3 a.m. a few nights ago some bright folks decided to destroy the anti-apartheid shanties erected on the Green. They used crow bars and other implements of destruction in order to restore "honor" to the College.

In the finest traditions of our time in college, this touched off a major counterprotest, including a sit-in at Parkhurst and various faculty meetings and teach-ins. No one hurt, but a lot of anger and debate. It is fascinating to be the parent this time as my daughter goes through all of this in Hanover.

Stay tuned. Now the news.

Keith Luckenbach is teaching high school English, trying to farm, and "watching the beans and two kids grow" in Madison, Connecticut. He calls this Conciousness III. I even forgot what that is.

My old South Fayer friend Mike Everett reported in from San Francisco where he is practicing law with Heller, Ehrman, White and McAuliffe. [Ed. Note. That is a big deal international law firm.] Mike spent '81 and '82 in Hong Kong, and by now has moved to Palo Alto.

Jim Bays is now VP and Senior Counsel for TRW in Cleveland, doing, among other things, friendly takeovers of seat belt companies in France, Spain, Italy, Canada, Mexico, and the U.S. He should get together with Bill Kennedy, who after his (pre-coke) DeLorean days is now general counsel for Rolls Royce North America.

Jeff McElnea is still hustling, running his promotional marketing business, Einson-Freeman, Inc., in New Jersey. His wife runs a "prosperous apparel manufacturer in N.Y." employing their two sons who are 4 and 7. He didn't say what she pays them.

Armand Cardello is a research psychologist for DOD in Natick. He and Sandy have two boys and a baby girl born in June. They live in Framingham, Mass., and Armand does Dartmouth interviewing.

Rob Sprinkle has left academic medecine to be a doctoral fellow at Princeton's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs.

David Shair is practicing law in Rockford, Illinois, and says he talked too much when he got called as a witness in a recent case. "Those who know me will find this easy to believe." Hell, when I knew him he never said a word.

Jim Coffey is a lawyer in North Bend, Ore. He's married with two kids, Brian - 8, and Sara - 6. He claims to have plenty of time to "hunt, fish, crab, clam, etc."

Mark Nibbelink is "selectively active" putting together drilling deals and doing oil and gas consulting in Austin. He rows and plays soccer weekly. Given the price of oil these days we wish you luck.

Bob Higginson is producing rapidly. In fact, most of the credit goes to Mardie, who recently gave birth to their fourth child, Lorna. Bob and Mardie live in Darnestown, Md.

Ivan Suzman has returned from South Africa. He just finished teaching at Bowdoin (biology and anthro), is the founder of the Maine Project on Southern Africa, and works actively with the black South African community. His message: "Dartmouth Divest Now!"

Tom Herman is a pediatric radiologist at Mass General, and just got married to Paula Thoman in Boston, with Msgr. Nolan of Acquinas House officiating.

Our great acting talent, Peter Phillips finished a 14 month stint on "All My Children" last year, as well as a one act play at the Ensemble Studio Theatre. He directed a play at the Hop in

'84, and now is chucking it all for law school in New York, with his two year old son in tow. Hey, this class has enough lawyers! Try medecine.

Steve Zrike (who dumped this chore on me and then ran off to South America where he could not be found) now claims to be back in Massachusetts where (still selling toothpaste for Colgate) he is in charge of expanding business to other countries. He is VP, Business Development and Planning of Princess House, Inc., a Colgate sub. Zrike, do not try to expand into Washington, or I will reveal what Princess, Inc. really does.

Mike DePetrillo has a third child, Catherine, and is still practicing anesthesiology in Schenectedy, N.Y. Vinnie Ferraro and wife Priscilla built a new house and added a second kid, Zachary. They had a mini-reunion on July 4 with John Ritchie and his wife Jane Roessner (and kids, Alexander, 5, and Rachel, 2), Cam and Jan Bopp, and Rusty Brough. Tagging along were Rod and Martha Smith and David and Karen Gilliat (both '69). "Highlight - making giant bubbles with bubble-maker from NYC." No comment; sounds pretty weird for grown ups.

Tom Duffy moved to Carmel where he has a small real estate law firm. His wife is the local DA. They hike, sail and enjoy their two little daughters.

Anders Rhodin is an orthopaedic surgeon in Lunenburg, Mass. He just designed and built a house and road trips to Dartmouth with his five year old son for bonfires.

Neil Johnson and Susan produced boy and girl twins last year: Tyler and Bailey. He runs a child development center and she is an architect for 3M in St. Paul. Neil sees Witt Fram, Bob Milbert and Tom Pugh occasionally.

Ted Kusterman ran the 10k Atlanta Peachtree Road Race last year and "won a coveted t-shirt." Not me. I just buy 'em. He and Beth live in Stone Mountain, and Ted works in the admissions office of DeVry Institute of Technology (Bell and Howell).

Bruce Ferguson is also in the south. He teaches at the School of Design of the U of Georgia, was elected secretary of the Council of Educators in Landscape Architecture, and, most important, had a third son born last June.

Dudley Hagen should have returned to the US by now after 8 years in Moscow, if visa plans for his Soviet wife Layla didn't fall through. Dudley works for the Soviet publisher PROGRESS, for the Anglo American School, and part time for NBC.

John Hinderaker is a partner in the law firm of Faegre and Benson in Minneapolis. His wife Shannon is a paper conservator with the Bell rare books library at the U of M.

Bill Conway is chief financial officer of MCI. He claims that he "never used Dartmouth to lobby" me while I was on the Hill. Which makes him the only person at MCI who didn't. [ed. note. Bill is doing very well.] Bill has a III, born in 1978.

Dick Wooster is in investment banking, especially new business development, at Smith Barney in New York, but lives in New Canaan. Don West headed to the other coast, managed a restaurant, got a law degree, practiced in his "hometown's big deal law firm, and spent the last two years building my own practice." He now fishes and boats in the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta. "Dartmouth seems long ago and far away . . . ."

For Mac Barrett "the term 'doubleheader' has assumed an entirely different meaning." On June 13, exactly 14 years after graduation, Leigh and Mac produced twins, Lucy and Allen. All are fine.

Mark Nelson, I discover, is in my area. He runs state and local government relations for DuPont in Va., N.C. and S.C. Suzanne works for C&P Telephone. And the two of them had their first child last May, David, at 10lbs. 14oz. Whew!

Bo Smith is in St. Paul with two kids, Buster and Pearl, 5 1/2 and 3. Charley Callery has landed at the Scripps Clinic in San Diego doing general surgery and surgical oncology. He got there by way of San Francisco, UCLA, and Sloan Kettering. Susan and he have a little girl, Shauna, who scaled Mt. Moosilauke in a back pack at 6 mos.

Old friend Sam Webster is a general litigation lawyer in Norfolk. Jane shows lawyers how to use computers, and Emily, 5, and Russ, 3, keep them moving.

Sam provided news of my old roommate, Spen Smith who works for Weyerhauser. After stints in Italy and Great Britain he is back in the U.S. He is married, with two kids. Bill Powers is in academic medicine in St. Louis, is married, and reportedly has a new addition.

Another Hong Kong type. John Short, wife Ethel, and kids Sam, Rebecca, and Lisa, are there for Citibank, and enjoying it.

Andy Urban is a partner in the very successful law firm of Mintz, Levin (and 19 other names, all of which the receptionist is forced to say when you call) with offices in Boston and D.C. Andy is in Boston. He and Robin have a four year old boy.

Eric Ranney broke new ground last year. He and Clare had their first child, Christopher, and he started his own law firm, Hishon and Ranney, 7 lawyers doing commercial business practice.

Frank Watkins is an orthopedic surgeon in Washington, D.C. Last May he married Ellawese Smith who had graduated from Howard Univ. Medical School a day earlier. Our Gene Thibodeaux was best man. Tom Grice and Keith Jackson also attended.

Tim Cox is back in D.C. after 6 years in Honduras. He works for a high tech consulting firm. Wife Marta is a senior staffer in the Interamerican Development Bank. They have two kids, Danny and Sasha.

Bill Orosz is in fact developing all of Florida. He has 29 communities up in 13 counties with plans to invade northward this year. He and Jody have three boys. Craig Robelen takes time off from reunion fundraising to compete with Bill in Florida real estate, but only for the upscale customers. Craig sells houses- but their minimum price tag is $1 million, and these come fully furnished, sometimes including complete wine cellars. I just want to know how many of Craig's clients speak English or pay with anything other than cash.

Joe Cecere should be finished with his Air Force obligation by now and started in his own oral surgery practice in Ft. Worth. Dottie and he (plus Carl, Margaret, and David) claim to be naturalized Texans, "far cry from Revere Beach!"

I should have known. Bob Calhoun (house shrink at C&G in '71) is a practicing psychologist in Fort Collins where he and Sandy (and Grant and Gwen) "get lost in the mountains whenever we can."

Tom Cerva writes that "after only modest success with natural intelligence, I have decided to pursue artificial intelligence" at DEC in Massachusetts. He and Barbara celebrated their 10th in October. Brian Copeland and wife Nancy live in La Jolla where he is a neurosurgeon at the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation. "Fish are jumping and the cotton is high."? Copeland? Brain surgeon?

John Lippman is still a big deal in news broadcasting in Seattle. He took the 10 day Rassias crash course in French at Dartmouth last summer before going to Europe and admits to some culture shock, especially wife Sandy's reaction to AD.

Tom Morton is a serious architect "in charge of the design of the Museum of Modern Art expansion and the World Financial Center in New York City." He's now designing an office tower in San Francisco. His wife was a graphic designer and now paints and teaches at Cooper Union and Yale.

Don O'Neill got married in late '84 to Sally Martin in a "mini-Tabard reunion with Jon Oplinger also in attendance. Motown ruled the dance floor, but gatoring was held to a minimum." Dan and Sally live in Harwinton, Ct.

Vahram Erdekian reports that he and wife Lisa are living in Weston, Mass., and working for Data General. They see Frank and Margit Batchelor who live one town over in Wellesley.

Bob Mustard is a food broker in Boston, but clearly devotes a lot to sailing. He sails his International 210 out of the Eastern Point Yacht Club, where he has moved up to third in the fleet, is chairman of the race committee, fleet captain, and on the board of governors of the 210 association.

Our Scandinavian star is alive and well. Gunnar Klintberg is helping Scandinavian companies find investment oppertunities in the U.S. as a member of Nordic American Investment Banking. He lives in Old Greenwich, Ct.

Jeff McHugh is doing a lot of stuff. He got married to Pat, and they are blessed with Bridget, Ian and Molly. He is dean of students at Fairfield Woods Middle School, and is an adjunct professor at Fairfield University (teaching Basic to grad students). Plus, he is "lead banjo player with the internationally acclaimed Ash Creek String Band."

Finally, I have the sad task of letting you know that Charlie Aalto died last October 1. His folks' address is 243 N. Pleasant Ave., Ridgewood, N.J. 07450. I do not know the cause of death.

Dan Taggart died on November 14 after a long struggle with tuberculosis, leaving his wife Ginette, and one child. Dan had sent me a card when it looked like he was mending. "I'm back in Pa. after a bad bout with TB - getting a masters degree while recuperating. I had thought the Magic Mountain was a purely literary device, but I've found out otherwise. Ginette has stayed in Haiti for the time being to keep the studios operating." The two addresses I have are: 52 Bois Verna, Port-Au-Prince, Haiti F6475; and #8 Old Stonehouse Road, Carlisle, Pa. 17013.

I did not know either Dan or Charlie very well but I remember several times when they each touched my life in special ways.

Send in your post cards those of you from whom we have had no news. Send your check to Dartmouth. And reserve the reunion dates. Best wishes for a happy and peaceful New Year.

P.S. Attached is a list of missing classmates. The College would like your help in tracking them down. Please let Barbara Sasso, Department of Research and Records, Dart Col, Blunt Alumni Center, Hanover, N.H. 03755, know where she can find any of these folks.
